DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 52 and 53 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Newman.

Newman teaches a pick apparatus adapted for use by a user having a thumb with a means, to strum/pick strings of a musical instrument, comprising: a pick (30) adapted to be held by the use and to be moved in a connecting and strumming relationship with the strings of the musical instrument; a thumb sleeve(40) adapted for disposition on the thumb of a user (column 8, lines 30-35); whereby the pick apparatus is configured for use by the user having said thumb and attachment means being adapted for releasably attaching the pick to the sleeve. Newman further discloses the use of hook and loop fasteners (see figure 3) .

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 54-59 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Newman in view of Mapson.

Newman further teaches the use of a pick with a first position is an extended position; and the second position is a retracted position (see figures 2 and 3).

Newman does not teach specifically that his pick has a tip and a longitudinal configuration where the first is laterally and longitudinally spaced from the second position on the meatus of the thumb.

Mapson also discloses a device where the thumb is disposed generally in a plane and has a tip and a longitudinal configuration where the first is laterally and longitudinally spaced from the second position on the meatus of the thumb (see figure 2). Newman also teaches the pick in different positions with first angles and second angles in proximal relationship to the tip of the thumb (see figures 2 and 5-8).

Newman discloses a device where the attachment means(180) and the pick are disposed exteriorly of the sleeve. Newman discloses a device where the attachment means (80) and the pick are disposed interior of the sleeve with the tip projecting exteriorly and through the distal opening of the sleeve.

The device as taught by Mapson included lateral holes(18) that extend through the sleeve.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the pick as taught by Newman so that the thumb is disposed generally in a plane and has a tip and a longitudinal configuration where the first is laterally and longitudinally spaced from the second position on the meatus of the thumb as taught by Mapson in order to provide a pick that is easily rotatable.

5. Claims 62-67 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Newman in view of Mapson and Curtis.

Newman and Mapson do not disclose the specific use of a seam.

Curtis discloses the use of a band where fabric is formed into a sleeve by a stitched seam (see figure 2a).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the pick as taught by Newman so that the thumb is disposed generally in a plane and has a tip and a longitudinal configuration where the first is laterally and longitudinally spaced from the second position on the meatus of the thumb as taught by Mapson and the seam as disclosed by Curtis in order to provide a sleeve that is durable.

6. Claim 60 and 61 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Newman in view of Gallagher.

Newman does not disclose the use of a pad.

Gallagher discloses the use of a guitar pick with a pad(24) disposed on the side of the pick opposite the attachment means(26); the tapered pad having a first surface generally parallel to the plane of the pick and a second surface generally non-parallel to the plane of the pick (see figure 1).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the pick as taught by Newman with the pad as taught by Gallagher in order to provide a pick that conforms to the contours of the player's fingertip.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claims 10-18 and 23-51 are allowed.

Response to Arguments

8. Applicant's arguments filed 9/12/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Newman clearly discloses Newman teaches a pick apparatus adapted for use by a user having a thumb with a means, to strum/pick strings of a musical instrument, comprising: a pick (30) adapted to be held by the use and to be moved in a connecting and strumming relationship with the strings of the musical instrument; a thumb sleeve(40) adapted for disposition on the thumb of a user; attachment means including a first structure carried by the sleeve and a second structure carried by the pick (see figure 16), the attachment means being adapted for releasably attaching the pick to the sleeve; the attached pick being moveable by the fingers of the use between a first position and a second position translationally spaced from the first position on the meatus of the thumb. The movement of the pick as taught by Newman clearly depends on the motion of the finger and since the meatus of the finger is holding the pick, the movement of the pick clearly depends on the movement of the finger. Therefore the positions of the pick can vary.
